Campaigners have two opportunities to learn the law

In advance of municipal votes in some of Miami-Dade's biggest cities this fall (including Miami, Miami Beach, Homestead and Hialeah) and many more local and state races set for 2010, candidates and their staff members can brush up on election and fundraising regulations at a Campaign Skills Seminar sponsored by the Miami-Dade Commission on Ethics and Public Trust. For convenience, two similar events are planned – in Hialeah on August 26th and in Homestead on September 16th.

The seminars will provide essential information to declared candidates, individuals considering running for election or anyone who wants to understand the legal and ethical obligations of seeking public office. Speakers include representatives of the Miami-Dade Ethics Commission, the Miami-Dade League of Cities, the State Attorney's Office and the Elections Department. The events are free and open to the public.

The Ethics Commission was created in 1996 as an independent agency with advisory and quasi-judicial powers. It is composed of five members, serving staggered terms of four years each. Through a program of education and outreach, the Commission seeks to empower the community and bolster public trust.
