Health And Safety Program

Since our existence, RMI has not had any fatality or serious accident that has resulted from an error by RMI. We believe that this strives from our proactive approach to training our employees. RMI's approach to health and safety involves numerous components that are necessary for every project. Below is the structure our company has successfully implemented which allows us to maintain a high level of safety throughout all our jobsites. These are as follows:

- Education - Communication of safety, health policies, and procedures begins on the employee's first day at the employee orientation. Each RMI employee receives training on the identification of potential hazards they may encounter on the jobsite, preventive measures or corrective actions, and the OSHA regulations. RMI keeps employees informed of updates or changes to the site health and safety plan and OSHA regulations through safety meetings, written notices, and posting of notices on the company bulletin board. RMI communicates this information in a manner understandable to all employees.

Furthermore, RMI ensures that all their key employees are properly train. All key employees have the following certifications:

- 30-Hour OSHA Certification
- Competent Person Certification
- Intermediate or Advanced Maintenance of Traffic Certification
- QC Manager
- CPR

Moreover, every Monday our employees receive a Safety Tool Box Talk with new topics.

- Subcontractor Pre-Qualification – RMI selects only Subcontractors who share the same values regarding Health and Safety values and have an excellent record.
- Enforcement – Safety is the responsibility of every RMI employee. Safety is a metric that everyone on the job will always remember; and at RMI, we take it very seriously and expect our subcontractors and vendors to follow suit. On an RMI project, no one person can say safety is their only responsibility. Safety is everyone's responsibility. RMI's Supervisors are tasked with enforcing that all RMI employees and Subcontractors are performing their tasks in a safe manner. RMI employees are warned that after the third safety violation, they will no longer be employed by RMI. We consider that a no tolerance policy is necessary to make sure that everyone at the jobsite gets home safe on a daily basis.
