Background and Relevant Information¹

A 1993 Engineering Study of Marine Stadium conducted by the Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection and Insurance Company showed that the Stadium could have been repaired for a cost estimated between $2-3 million; and the Stadium was not damaged during Hurricane Andrew. Unfortunately, the City of Miami did not act on the results of this study.

On October 8, 2009, the City of Miami Historic and Environmental Preservation Board designated both the Marine Stadium and the Basin as historic.

On January 2010, an engineering study was organized with the assistance of the World Monuments Fund and the firm of Simpson Gumpertz and Heger (SGH). Its purpose was to document the cost of restoration of the concrete. The study estimated that restoration costs would range from $5.5-$8.5 million; depending upon how much additional work is done to extend the life of the restoration. This figure compares to estimates as high as $15 million done in a previous report (2008) for the City of Miami.

SGH used core sampling techniques to document costs. The report done for the City was based on a visual inspection. SGH is familiar with the Marine Stadium as they had done a study in 1993 of the structure. The sub-contractor, Structural Preservation Systems, worked on the City's previous study. The study recommends that a follow-up study be conducted to determine the condition and costs of the piles under the land and under the sea bed.

Results of engineering study from February 2010 Update: Concrete restoration costs estimated to be between $5.5-8.5 million, depending upon how much additional preventive work is done to extend the life of the structure. The estimates do not include other aspects of renovation (seats, bathrooms, railings, Handicapped accessibility). Also, a follow-up study is necessary to determine the condition of the piles.

Questions

1. During the March 10, 2010, Transit, Infrastructure and Roads Committee, it was mentioned by City of Miami officials that they were seeking funding from the federal government. What is the status of this funding?
2. Also, officials mentioned that a 501c3 was being created to accept donations for the Miami Marine Stadium restoration project. What is the status of the 501c3?
3. How much has been donated by private foundations to the Miami Marine restoration project?
4. Did the GOB-BBC Citizens Advisory Committee review this item on March 23, 2010?
