

Paul Savage

Biography Information

Paul C. Savage is an of counsel with the international law firm Greenberg Traurig. Mr. Savage is the Co-Chair of the firm's Green Building and Sustainability Practice Group and designated as a Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design Accredited Professional (LEED® AP) by the United States Green Building Council (USGBC). Working in the firm's Miami office, he serves as Chair of the Green Building Committee of the Builders Association of South Florida (BASF), and was appointed to the Miami Green Commission for the City of Miami by Mayor Manny Diaz, where he helped craft the City's core sustainability policy document, the Climate Change Action Plan. Most recently, Mr. Savage was selected to serve on the Board of Directors of the Florida Green Building Coalition (FGBC) for the 2008-2009 term.

Mr. Savage has more than 10 years of experience in governmental and environmental law, and he assists clients with environmental and land use issues in connection with green building projects. He also represents green building materials manufacturers from the solar, air conditioning and other industries in connection with energy efficiency and building code issues.