Q: How will the Supervisor of Elections handle voter registration applications now with Amendment 4?

A: The Miami-Dade Elections Department proudly serves potential voters in the act of voter registration. Under this new law (Amendment 4), the role of the Supervisor of Elections remains the same. We rely on the voter indicating on the voter registration application that they are eligible to vote. If the voter affirms they meet all qualifications, we will register them. The voter's information is then sent to the Florida Division of Elections, who will research and verify the voter's identity and eligibility under the new law.
