Did you know?
Every cell phone turned in
will also help save gorillas!

Cell phones include coltan, a mineral extracted in the deep forests of Congo in central Africa, home to the world's endangered lowland gorillas. Fueled by the worldwide cell phone boom, Congo's coltan mining business has in recent years led to a dramatic reduction of animal habitat and the rampant slaughter of great apes. By turning in your cell phone, we can hopefully reduce the need for additional coltan ... and help protect the gorillas.
