WHEREAS, some airport workers, including ticket agents, cabin and terminal custodians, security guards, and baggage handlers who are normally afforded health care have had their benefits suspended as a result of COVID-19, while others who have never been afforded coverage continue to work without sick leave or health care coverage during this crisis; and

WHEREAS, other airport workers are being laid off or sent home without pay; and

WHEREAS, employees without medical coverage, or who are unable to purchase medical coverage for themselves, are less likely to receive timely testing for COVID-19, or less likely to receive proper care in the event they contract the virus; and

WHEREAS, airport workers who are laid off or have a reduction in hours may face severe financial burdens, including the inability to pay their rent or mortgage, or purchase other necessities; and

WHEREAS, the United States Congress has already taken steps to address these issues by passing legislation like House Resolution (H.R.) 6201, which, among other things:
