5 Healthy Eating Tips for the Holidays

It's the time of the holiday. Months, in fact. Between Thanksgiving, Christmas, Hanukkah, Kwanzaa, and New Year's Eve, there's no shortage of festivities to celebrate. And with those festivities comes food. Lots and lots of food.

Tip #1: Don't Starve Your Pets. You may not be able to resist those puppy dog eyes begging for a bite of your turkey dinner, but overfeeding your pets can lead to obesity and other health problems.

- Stick close to your chef's knife when preparing food. Pets are notorious for stealing food off the counter when you're not looking.
- If you have a sweet tooth, a lot of dishes are made with chocolate, which is toxic to dogs and cats.
- Fruits like apples and grapes are healthy for humans, but can cause digestive problems for pets.

Tip #2: Keep Your Resolutions in Perspective. Yes, it's that time of the year when we're supposed to make resolutions to improve ourselves. But don't let the holidays be the time when you throw your resolutions out the window.

- Set reasonable goals. Don't set yourself up for failure by setting goals that are unrealistic. Apply incremental improvements, such as losing a few pounds or exercising a few times per week.
- Seek shade. Avoid the temptation of sitting near the food table.
- Wear protective clothing. Cover your mouth when you're tempted to eat. Wear gloves when you're tempted to touch food. Consider laundry detergents with a bitter taste to discourage you from eating your clothes. Or, if you're a person of a certain age, wear a bib. Whatever it takes to keep you from overindulging.

Tip #3: Don't Overdo It. Overeating is the most obvious way to overindulge during the holidays, but it's not the only way.

- Limit each bite. Your mother was right when she told you to chew your food. Chewing each bite 20 times will help you eat more slowly and feel full faster.
- Avoid sitting down. Sitting down makes you more likely to overeat. Stand up instead.
- Dress correctly. To prevent short-term overeating, wear clothes that are uncomfortably tight around the waist. To prevent long-term overeating, wear clothes that are comfortably tight around the waist.
- Watch what you drink. Alcohol is full of empty calories and can make you more likely to overeat.
- Minimize sin bin. If you can't do it, don't bring it. Don't bring it. Don't bring it. Don't bring it.
